Importance of Regular Servicing And Maintenance

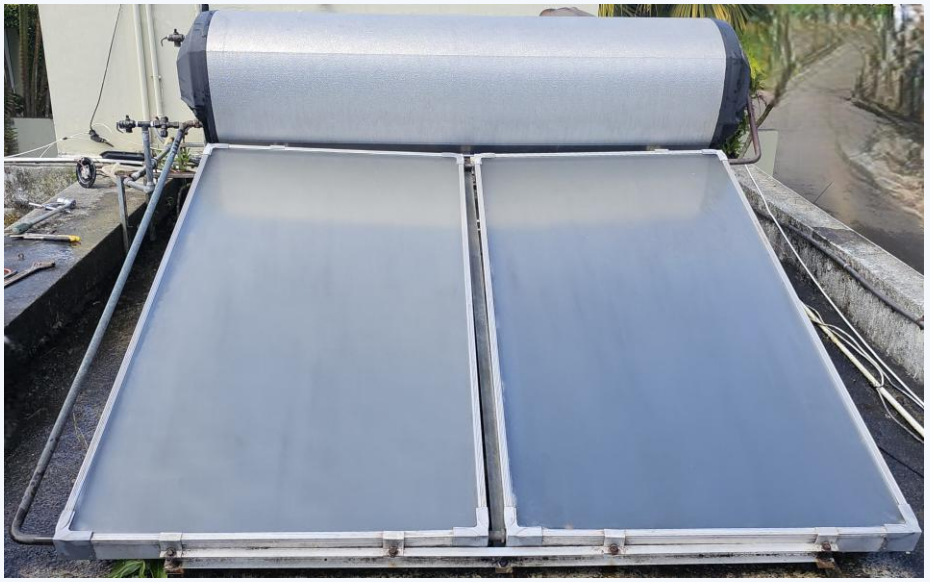

- A solar water heater is a long-term asset but only with regular care
- Sun, heat, pressure, and water quality wear on it daily. Servicing catches problems early, before they become failures
- It isn’t just “good practice” it’s what keeps your system efficient, reliable, and cost-effective for the long term
- Skip it, and performance fades quietly until you are facing cold water, leaks, or expensive repairs
- Each annual service includes panel cleaning, verification of the hot and cold valves, checking of the element and thermostat, and flushing of the system

The Difference A Service Makes

Before

After

The same system, cleaned during a routine service visit

The Anode Bar :
Big Protection - Small Premium

- The anode bar is your system's built-in bodyguard: it corrodes in place of the steel, so the tank does not have to
- Left unchecked, a fully consumed anode bar leaves the tank at risk of corrosion
- Think of replacement as a minimal-cost insurance premium. It helps preserve the tank's internal structure and safeguard its long-term lifespan
- We inspect the anode every year under our service plan and replace it when it is worn. Solahart requires inspection at least every five years

Old and new side by side - replaced during the service visit on the previous slide
